

As far as group interaction goes I would say that I'm essentially responsible for establishing communications between group members. I found Chris pretty early on and from there we had agreed to pursue a project centering around ecommerce transactions. While searching for additional group members I reached out separately to Shawn and Jordan and the two eventually agreed to join. They both wanted to follow a project based more around inventory management systems though, so I agreed with Chris to pursue their idea. I then put together a group chat to make further discussions more efficient.

In terms of planning the project I participated in the group discussions we had on both the project charter rough draft and the system vision document. I was also responsible for creating the project schedule rough draft and making sure to establish reasonable project checkpoints. Finally I used all previous discussions and documents to create the Domain Class Diagram for the UML Models assignment.
